

If somebody has sex with anyone who hasn't given their consent, it is rape. Nobody should be pressured into any sexual activity. This is abuse and illegal.

It is always essential to get clear agreement (consent) before any sexual activity with another person. This includes everything from kissing and touching to sex itself. It could be considered rape or sexual assault if consent is not given.

Consent can't be based on previous experience and just because it's been given once, that doesn't cover that person forever. It needs to be renewed and reconfirmed. If someone has been drinking alcohol it can affect their ability to communicate clearly. It is not an excuse to pressure them or take advantage of them. Consent is when someone agrees by choice.

Published April 2019